Donor # 4139
Interview Notes

Donor 4139 is a handsome man with tanned olive skin, full lips and a small nose. He has very nice teeth and a beautiful smile with defined dimples on both cheeks. He has small almond-shaped blue eyes. His muscular chest and arms filled out his well fitting black t-shirt. He wore faded jeans, flip flops and $5 dollar “truck stop” sunglasses that currently adorn the faces of pop stars and celebrities alike. His voice was calm and soothing and he had a shy, yet inviting demeanor.

Donor 4139 speaks very fondly of his family, extolling the virtues of his mother’s talents, especially her ability to cook soul food and Cajun cuisine. He explained that family ties are important and following the death of his grandfather, his grandmother (and her toy poodle) moved closer to be near her family.

He told me that his family is very active and as a child he and his siblings would go on family camping trips and hike for miles together. Because he grew up in an area accessible to a range of outdoor activities he had access to both the snow and the ocean, allowing him to explore California’s landscape and advance his skills in both snowboarding and surfing. Recently, he has become more of an avid hockey fan and now spends his time playing on a competitive team.

Some of his favorite music includes Jack Johnson, Dave Matthews Band, O.A.R and Mat Kearny. He is also a fan of hip-hop, both mainstream and underground. He mentioned that he is not a fan of pop country music, which I found to be a bit ironic because he looks like a bit like the heart-throb country star Keith Urban. His also has a range of taste when it comes to comedians. He loves the offbeat humor of the shoe, “The Office”, the crude humor of George Carlin and Eddie Murphy and the joyous humor of Ellen Degeneres.

Although he has been somewhat private about his decision to become a sperm donor, he has still enlisted his family’s help when completing his health history packet; even calling his father during the interview to clarify information. Overall, donor 4139 could be described as a patient, grateful and easy going guy. He has an appealing look, is very attractive and has a strong presence.
