Donor 3469 Interview Notes

Donor 3469 is a good-looking young man with warm brown eyes. He was nervous at the beginning of our interview, but relaxed when I began talking to him about his family.

The donor recently started college and is excited about living in northern California. We spoke about his many academic interests. Currently he is interested in getting through his general education requirements, but he thinks that he will most likely go to graduate school, possibly in conservation resource studies. He is interested in disciplines that blend science and humanities. He enjoys reading, and said that he was currently reading a philosophy textbook from high school that he had never had time to read. Donor 3469 describes himself as a lifelong learner who wants to learn new things throughout his life. Although he is prioritizing his college education right now, he knows there is so much more to life than academics.

Donor 3469 still has many relatives in Korea and spoke about enjoying his visits there. He feels fortunate to have been able to travel there every couple years. He speaks some Korean and wants to learn more. Besides reading and playing video games, he likes classical music. He has played the piano and the trombone since high school and still finds time to practice in the music room at school. He was on the swim team throughout high school, and still swims laps to stay in shape.

I found donor 3469 to be a very nice person. I feel he has a successful future ahead of him and I am confident that he will achieve his life goals.
