Donor # 4157
Interview Notes

The first adjective that comes to mind when describing Donor 4157 is handsome. He has strong features, beautiful skin, bright blue eyes and silky hair. He has long limbs with well-defined muscle tone. His face is long and regal and he has been described by some staff members as, “flawless”. His mannerisms are graceful and he is polite and mature. He has a relaxed demeanor and carries a conversation with ease.

Donor 4157 is a very creative man and he comes from an artistic family with his mother, father and sister all involved in design and art. His father is also a chemist, which translates as another form of creativity. Although he says his interests are wide-ranging, sculpture and design are the two most prominent passions for Donor 4157. Currently, Donor 4157 is working as a freelance artist doing automotive industrial design. Essentially, he designs new car models and creates prototypes for exterior car styling. His advancement in this field shows his high degree of skill level. His ultimate goal is to transfer into product design and start his own business. He is also very interested in fine arts and sculpture. He enjoys creating busts and figures. Donor 4157 describes sculpture as the ability to build value and emotion out of something that may normally be discarded as waste.

Donor 4157 is currently married and acknowledges his wife as a wonderful person and source of support. He expressed that his wife is also 100% supportive of his decision to become a donor. When asked why he wanted to become a donor he simply states, “it seems natural to be able to help someone have children of their own.” Donor 4157 understands the desire to create a family and mentioned that he and his wife want to have children one day.

Donor 4157 is an absolutely phenomenal donor overall. I also strongly feel that he is a wonderful addition to the Identity-Release® Program.
